POLITICAL

What is Thought by Politicians at Washington of the Ohio Victory

Bayard Wins the Warner Bill Fight—Thurman Permanently on the Shelf—The Chances of Garfield Taft and Matthews for the Senatorship—Secretary Sherman Possibly a Dark Horse The Democrats of Ohio will Look to S Jones Tilden

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE OREGONIAN

WASHINGTON Oct [illegible]—The decisive [illegible]ters of the republican triumph in Ohio has occasioned much surprise in Washington among republicans as well as democrats and was yesterday and to-day the subject of widespread comment among sagacious political observers of both parties who agree that the victory is not only very signal but one which has several important bearings on [illegible] national politics It is considered to be the political death of Senator Thurman as it [illegible] the election of some republican to his [illegible] in the senate and [illegible] his presidential hopes for many it is [illegible]. It is not agreed that in just the proportion which yesterday's verdict is disastrous to Senator Thurman as a candidate for the presidency it is advantageous to Secretary Sherman It starts anew his boom whereas had Ohio gone democratic yesterday he would have been as hopelessly out of the race as Senator Thurman now is It is freely predicted that hereafter there will be no further talk about removing Senator Bayard from the chairmanship of the finance committee and it may be considered tolerably certain that the Warner silver bill which was passed by the house to help the democracy in Ohio will remain strangled in Bayard's committee room General Garfield is now the most prominent candidate for the senatorship and is backed by the stalwart republicans of the Western Reserve which gives the banner republican majorities Ex Attorney General Taft is now a candidate with a goodly following it being the impression if indeed it be not the fact that he represents the Grant feeling in Ohio Then there is Stanley Matthews of whom it is said that he has aspirations for another term of senatorial life

Congressman Tom Young of Cincinnati is himself a candidate, and in the opinion of some, there is a dangerous dark horse in the person of Secretary Sherman should the latter conclude between now and January next, when the newly elected legislature will choose a senator that his presidential outlook is not as flattering as it should be It is understood however that he has lately disclaimed being a candidate for the senate

The veteran democratic editor of the Cincinnati Enquirer telegraphs to a Washington friend yesterday news of the overwhelming republican victory, and concludes his dispatch in the following characteristic style "Sherman's great wealth, insane democratic legislation and disgraceful mismanagement on the part of the democrats have turned Ohio into a state of the stalwart character It is hardly necessary to say that the Ohio democrats will henceforth look to S Jones Tilden"

Talk About the Republican Nomination.

[From the New York Herald.]

But there is a portion of the public which regards these demonstrations in a different light The friends of the avowed republican candidates for the presidency are watching at a distance with intense jealousy the great outpouring of popular feeling on the Pacific coast, because they fear it may be turned to political account in emergencies not unlikely to arise If General Grant should be welcomed with the same enthusiastic warmth in other parts of the country the republican party would be converted into dry tinder, which could easily be kindled into a blaze if his name should next year be suddenly sprung upon the republican national convention Suppose, for illustration, that Mr Conkling, Mr Blaine, Mr Sherman and Mr Washburne should be candidates in the convention each pressed by his friends, each receiving the votes of one or more states but none receiving votes enough to make a majority Suppose further, that there should be six or eight or ten ineffectual ballotings, in which the friends of the several candidates were unyielding and the strongest of the candidates still fell short of votes enough to nominate him. If at an advanced stage of such a deadlock some astute and dexterous admirer of Gen Grant, who had been lying in wait and watching for the golden crisis of opportunity should then propose to cut the knot by nominating Grant by acclamation it is not difficult to imagine the hurricane of resounding plaudits with which the captivated convention might respond to such a proposal

The Merciless Despotism in South Carolina

[From the New York Tribune Sept. 30]

The South Carolina chivalry are getting their shotguns into working order again it seems. The shooting of Nix was a mere hint of what will happen this year and next if the republicans of South Carolina dare to assert their right to cast the vote of the state for a republican candidate for president The letter of an occasional correspondent in that state printed elsewhere, reports the significant expressions of the chairman of the democratic state committee He warns the republican majority, in a newspaper interview, that any attempt to reorganize the party will necessarily produce disturbances and be resisted to the last extremity " and adds quietly that there will be a "lively time in South Carolina" next year The poor negro voters know what "a lively time" means—too often a bullet in the back and they are not likely to need many such hints, unless they are animated by an unusually brave spirit. Our correspondent's letter states that the republicans are fully determined to make an attempt, at least to reclaim the state next year and it may be that we shall soon see another battle for political freedom fought upon the soil of South Carolina

Beaconsfield's Unpopularity

[M D Conway's Letter to the Cincinnati Commercial]

Lord Beaconsfield's government might this week search even the hitherto friendliest columns for a kind word in vain It could not be re elected if it should appeal to the people A decided majority in my opinion, is now against them and bitterly deplores their foreign policy Many even of their influential aristocratic friends are beginning to manifest dissatisfaction especially such—and they are not a few—as have sons and friends lying dead in the wilds of Africa and Afghanistan—dead in wars which have won no glory for their country but in the belief of millions of their countrymen even shame

Preparing for Emergencies

From the Cincinnati Commercial Ind

Blaine who is now booming in Ohio came as near being born in this state as a man could do whose parents were located on the wrong side of the river The streams that meander so to speak through his native county empty into the Ohio The tears that James shed when a child into the brooks that washed away his father's fences flowed this way to the sea If it seems necessary we can at any time claim that James is an Ohio man

"Revolution" in England

From the Chicago Tribune

In an editorial on the proposed change of the land laws in Great Britain the London Times says "Revolutions do not proceed by rule or [illegible] The horror of some of the old fogy readers of the Times when they find it coolly discussing the possibility of revolution—a revolution in merry England—[illegible] be easier imagined than described Revolution in that connection is a very ugly word

The greenbackers and the democrats of Maine are now quarreling as to their respective share of blame for the recent defeat The democrats show that their party has made large gains during the year while the greenbackers claim the credit for the victory of last year and declare that it was fusion with the democrats that killed the party this year One greenback paper turns its rooster upside down and underneath is the legend "Fusion did it" Thus do brethren disagree

A great temperance movement has been organized in Great Britain A joint stock company is to be formed with a capital of one million pounds sterling in shares of one pound each The Archbishop of Canterbury heads the list of subscribers, and as the money is raised, temperance houses are to be opened in all parts of the United Kingdom

ARIZONA

More Outrages by Indians—Forty Persons Killed.

TUCSON Oct 16—A special to the Daily Star from Silver City, N M says that Indians have been committing terrible depredations in the Rio Grande valley and southwest of Fort Cummings for several days past The people of Colorado have been besieged and fighting since Saturday and appeal for aid Sunday a volunteer company of 30 men under Capt John C Crouch, went from Mesilla to their aid They met 100 Indians near Colorado and 18 miles from Slocum's ranch on the side of the road After a severe fight the volunteers were compelled to fall back They had a running fight into Slocum's ranch The killed in this fight were W T Jones county clerk of Dona Ana Co and four Mexicans On receipt of the news at Mesilla, two more companies of 80 men were raised by Col Rynearson, composed of the best men in Mesilla valley The companies were to join Crouch to day at Slocum's and go to Colorado Two trains were captured yesterday west of Slocum's In one of them eleven men one woman and one child were killed, and in the other, all hands escaped Both trains were scattered and some of the oxen were killed and others left standing in the yokes Corpses lie all along the road The stage from east arrived this morning two hours late A number of people are known to have been killed within the past four or five days aggregate about 40 The Indian trail leaving the stage road yesterday leads towards Black Range and the vicinity of Hillsboro mining camp. A strong scouting party is thought to be in the vicinity of Colorado This is the most persistent fighting Indians have ever been known to do in this section They are in large bands and seem determined to stay in the country and fight and make a general warfare

AN AMAZONIAN FOREST

THE POETICAL IDEA OF A TROPICAL WILDERNESS DESTROYED

[Scribner's Monthly]

On three sides of the cane-field the forest rises in solid mass fully 100 feet. A distance of 15 or 20 miles may be has been reached by the hunters and the sarsaparilla gatherers beyond that the country is as completely a terra incognita as the other side of the moon But so far as we know, with very slight breaks the whole of the Amazonian highland is covered with this thick growth of trees there is no other forest region in the world of like extent, and none so remarkable for the variety and richness of its productions Where the land has been recently cleared we get a kind of section of the forest, hundreds of gray and white columns set close together like the pickets of a fence, and supporting a green roof above. But within everything is a maze, a chaotic confusion of tree-trunks and vines and branches and leaves.

Even on the ocean you are not so weighted with a sense of your insignificance as when wandering in these pathless solitudes. For at sea there is always the same horizon a definite boundary to vision and in the very attempt to reach beyond it the imagination forms an ideal ocean, a limited immensity The ship carries you on without any bodily exertion of your own you know that you are moving as you know that the earth moves but day after day there are the same sea and sky to give the lie to your reasoning In the forest you are forced to measure your power with the infinite

Guided by the compass, you keep a straight line for days together but it is not like a woodland walk at home you must do battle for your right of way cutting a narrow passage through hedge like thickets and mats of woody vines and interlaced branches And then after a day of hard fighting you lay yourself down at the foot of some giant tree and look up up to where the boughs are all mingled together, and the single leaves are undistinguishable, where the fragments of blue sky seem hardly more distant than the tree-tops, as if you saw them through an inverted telescope and off through the vague network of leaves, and tree trunks and rope like roots and twisted vines, until the vision is lost you know not where only you feel in your inmost soul that there is a mysterious and unfathomable depth beyond you know that you are hardly within the borders of this wilderness where you travel for months and never reach the end you compare your own littleness with the littleness of a single tree, which, standing alone would be a beacon for miles around, and you bow your head with fear and trembling with the cry of the human Be pitiful O God

At first there is only the overwhelming impression of the extent and impenetrable tangle After a while the eyes grow accustomed to the labyrinth and we begin to notice its component parts then we see how different the highland forest is from the picture we had drawn of it We get our ideas of the tropics from the greenhouses where a great number of broad leaved handsome plants are gathered from every part of the world and thrown together without any regard to their distribution in nature—all of them remarkable for their singular forms or bright colors, or showy flowers But the high forest has nothing to compare with this in many respects it rather resembles our woods at home only it is far thicker and higher

Palms are common in many places but as their tops are lost in the tangle above we hardly notice them only the large stem less curious sometimes form a peculiar foreground There are no bananas no callas no bamboos even the orchids and bromelias are hidden among the branches fifty feet over our heads For the most part the trees look much like northern species Almost all forest trees are straight and comparatively slender here the trunks are more buried in foliage and the upper branches are a hundred perhaps a hundred and fifty feet from the ground Some form fluted columns or buttresses around the roots a few are spiny in the foliage we only notice the curious effect produced by the preponderance of pinnate leaves as in the acacias and myrtles But in a northern wood over large tracts we find only pines or beeches or oaks or at most only four or five kinds together Here there will hardly be two kinds alike on an acre in a day's walk we may see three or four hundred species But there are exceptions to this in many places the ground is largely occupied by two or three species but not to the entire exclusion of others

At the laying of a foundation stone of a new chapel in England some ardent revivalists after depositing in the stone a bible the coins of the realm and all that sort of thing added the sheet of tinfoil whereon was phonographically printed Hold the Fort in Mr Sankey's own voice

CENSUS ENUMERATORS.

From the act of March 3 1879 which relates to the formation of enumeration districts the appointment of census enumerators their duties etc the following extracts are made

Sec [illegible] No enumerator shall be deemed qualified to enter upon his duties until he has received from the supervisor of the district to which he belongs a commission under his hand authorizing him to perform the duties of an enumerator and setting forth the boundaries of the subdivision within which such duties are to be performed by him

Sec 8 It shall be the duty of each enumerator after being qualified in the manner aforesaid to visit personally each dwelling house in his subdivision and each family therein and each individual living out of a family in any place of abode, and by inquiry made of the head of such family or of the member thereof deemed most credible and worthy of trust or of such individual living out of a family to obtain each and every item of information and all the particulars required by this act as of date June 1 1880 And in case no person shall be found at the usual place of abode of such family or individual living out of a family competent to answer the inquiries made in compliance with the requirements of this act, then it shall be lawful for the enumerator to obtain the required information, as nearly as practicable from the family or families or person or persons living nearest to such place of abode

Sec 11 The subdivision assigned to any enumerator shall not exceed four thousand inhabitants, according to the census of eighteen hundred and seventy * * * * * * The boundaries of all subdivisions shall be clearly described by civil divisions rivers roads public surveys or other easily distinguished lines.

The following practical suggestions in regard to enumerators, are made by Francis A Walker superintendent of the census

By the act of 1850 (Revised Statutes, 1878 § 21 8) the subdivisions for census purposes were not permitted to exceed 20,000 inhabitants unless that limitation should cause inconvenience in which case the subdivision might be larger By the act of 1879 (section 11) enumeration districts are not permitted to exceed 4000 inhabitants according to the census of 1870 It is the view of the department that the number of inhabitants in enumeration districts should ordinarily except in cities and large towns, fall considerably below this limit Only for the strongest reasons should more than one town or township in states where the civil township system exists be comprised in any enumeration district

The advantage to the government of such close limitation of districts will be found in the high degree of local knowledge secured. The enumerator knowing as will presumably be the case every house and every family of the town of which he is a resident will be placed almost beyond the danger of omissions which are liable to occur in the canvass of larger districts and will also be above being imposed upon by false statements which to a stranger might appear plausible enough

Country physicians within the circuit of their usual practice, would often be found excellent enumerators Their knowledge of vital conditions, their appreciation of the importance of trustworthy statistics together with their knowledge of the history of families, would combine to make returns alike of deaths and of the living population from officers of this class especially valuable. There would also be the practical consideration that men of this profession are, as a rule already "mounted," and their service in the capacity of enumerators would involve no expense whatever for outfit.

Schoolmasters have largely been found in England among the best qualified enumerators. Accustomed to keep lists and make reports, almost uniformly accurate in accounts, trained in punctuality and precision and accustomed to enforce them upon others, the teacher, within his school district, would generally do his work rapidly neatly and accurately

NAMES OF STEAM VESSELS.

The following circular letter has been received here by Collector Kelly

TREASURY DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON, D C, Oct 1 1879

To Collector and Other Officers of Customs

The attention of the department has been called to the general disregard of the requirements of law in relation to the painting of the names of steam vessels upon their sterns and the sides of their pilot houses

The laws referred to are as follows

Sec. 4178 —(Reproduced from section 3 act of December 31, 1792)—The name of every registered vessel and of the port to which she shall belong, shall be painted on her stern, on a black ground in white letters of not less than three inches in length If any vessel of the United States shall be found without having her name and the name of the port to which she belongs so painted, the owner or owners shall be liable to a penalty of fifty dollars recoverable one half to the person giving the information thereof the other half to the use of the United States.

Sec 4334.—Every licensed vessel shall have her name and the port to which she belongs painted on her stern in the manner prescribed for registered vessels and if any licensed vessel be found without such painting the owner thereof shall be liable to a penalty of twenty dollars.

Act of June 23, 1874 That section three of the act entitled An act concerning the registering and recording of ships and vessels approved December 31 1792, is hereby so amended as to allow the name of any vessel to be painted on her stern in yellow or gilt letters.

By these sections the names of all vessels are required to be painted upon their sterns, upon a black ground, in white, yellow or gilt letters not less than three inches in length

Sec. 4495 —Every steam vessel of the United States in addition to having her name painted on her stern shall have the same conspicuously placed in distinct, plain letters of not less than six inches in length, on each outer side of the pilot house, if it has such and in case the vessel has side wheels also on the outer side of each wheel house and if any such steamboat be found without having her name placed as required she shall be subject to the same penalty and forfeiture as provided by law in the case of a vessel of the United States found without having her name, and the name of the port to which she belongs painted on her stern

By this section the name of each steam vessel is required to be painted on the outer sides of the pilot house in distinct plain letters of not less than six inches in length No method of painting is designated in the section but it is preferred that the name should be painted on black in white gilt or yellow letters, as specified above

These provisions of law must be complied with and collectors and other chief officers of the customs will see that they are enforced

IN ITS NEW HOME

THE ASTORIA FIRE DEPARTMENT HOUSE THEIR NEW ENGINE IN THE GREAT CEREMONY—BANQUET BALL AND SPEECHES

REGULAR CORRESPONDENCE OF THE OREGONIAN

ASTORIA Oct 16 1879

The Astoria fire department enjoyed a most pleasant and successful party on Wednesday evening The occasion was the formal housing of No. 1's new Amoskeag fire engine and the completion of a splendidly furnished suite of reception rooms in the upper story of their engine house, which the company have elaborately fitted up at a cost of over $1500. In the afternoon from 3 to 5 o'clock the new engine was on exhibition and the reception rooms open for inspection by the public many of whom including scores of ladies availed themselves of the invitation

Later in the evening the members of the company in full uniform held a formal reception in their new rooms which was largely attended At 9 o'clock the company repaired to the spacious ball room in the Metropolitan hall and at least 200 couple joined in the mazy dance. The Rescue's and Hook & Ladder boys turned out in full force and in full uniform glad to do honor to the occasion and nothing loth to congratulate their brother firemen in possessing so fine an engine and building wherein to house it At 12 o'clock the assembled company marched to the Parker House where the tables were spread for about 200 and sat down to a bounteous repast so tastefully prepared as to satisfy the most fastidious.

Short speeches, appropriate and to the point, were made by Messrs O F Bell A Van Dusen, I W Case Chief Engineer Coffman of the fire department also Mr D C Ireland editor of the Astorian and the correspondent of THE OREGONIAN who as representatives of the press were the only invited guests outside of the fire department. After which the dance was again resumed and continued to the wee sma hours

The equipments and efficiency of the Astoria fire department are not surpassed if equaled, by any town of its size on the Pacific coast, and it is a matter for congratulation that only the most laudable spirit of generous rivalry exists among the members of the several companies. No 1's new second class Amoskeag steam engine is said to be the best of its grade ever sent from the company's works It is of a lighter and more elegant build without any diminution of power than any second class Amoskeag ever before constructed It cost the city $4100 and it is all paid for The boys are proud of it and Astoria is proud of the boys.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCT 17, 1879.

A REAL DANGER.

It would seem that with the example of 1876 before the country, the prevailing indifference both in congress and out of congress to the importance of providing a sure way of counting the electoral vote next year is inexcusable. And yet every citizen feels that it will not do to run the chances of a renewal of the electoral dispute next year. In the constitution and laws, as they existed in 1876, and still exist without change, no method is provided for the authoritative solution of difficulties that may arise at any future election, as they arose in the last presidential contest. The settlement then adopted was but a temporary makeshift. It established no enduring rule, and will hardly on any future occasion be accepted even as a precedent. A leading eastern journal, calling attention to this subject, well says that the emergency which made that expedient necessary pointed out a dangerously weak place in the constitution, which it was the first duty of patriotism to strengthen by carefully considered statutes, but which partisanship has allowed to remain unaltered, hoping to gain some mean profit from the weakness. The critical season approaches again, and the danger is greater than in 1876. Not that the contest is likely to be again as close as in 1876. The republicans in 1880 will bring a larger majority from the northern states alone than they would have had in the south four years before had every republican vote been honestly cast and counted, and Mississippi and Alabama joined Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida in the republican column. But a smaller cause will create a more serious complication now that then. There is a formidable condition of irritation, suspicion, and resentment in both parties. The republicans are convinced that had fair play been allowed they would have carried several southern states whose electoral votes were awarded to the democratic candidates, and that they got only partial justice in securing Louisiana, South Carolina and Florida through the electoral commission; while the democrats as strongly believe that they were actually cheated out of their rights, and are determined to monopolize the cheating themselves next year. Both parties therefore go into the presidential contest as a contest of intrigue as well as of voting strength, conscious that the struggle may not end at the polls, and that it may become a question, not of election, but of counting in. Each party is struggling to gain such advantages in the [illegible] to enable it to defend its own position, and assail that of its opponent. The most prominent democratic candidate for the presidency is scheming with the chairman of the election committee of the house to secure a majority of the state delegations, in order to elect a president after the opposing candidate shall have been counted out. It is not necessary to assume that the democratic party is more reckless than the republican; but it controls the counting machinery, and it is highly probable that if the republican candidate be elected by only a small majority in the electoral college, an effort will be made to cheat him out of his seat. This is a contingency against which provision should be made.

It may be justly said that the party which controls legislation in congress, especially and in a less degree all men in public life, as well as the press and the whole people, are guilty of inexcusable neglect on this subject, after the warning the country had from the last struggle, three years have been suffered to pass without arriving at a definite, impartial, and certain method of determining the choice of the electoral college for president. If political patriotism is measured by the willingness of public men to settle this vexed question, there are few patriots in the present congress; and if demagogism is measured by a disposition to leave it open and expose the country, for the sake of possible partisan gain, to the political revolution from which only the rare good sense of the people has heretofore saved it, there is a discouraging preponderance of demagogues among the public men of America. If no effort has indeed been made in congress to provide means of settling electoral disputes, but as the majority of that body have sent them to sleep forever in the committees, it is not difficult to conclude that a law securing a prompt and fair decision of the next electoral count would interfere with certain plans entertained by the democratic majority. At any rate, it is idle to expect action in the matter this winter, and the country must drift on to a possible crisis in the most hopeful condition of mind possible, trusting to the good sense of the people to save them from the scrape into which the selfish neglect of politicians is leading them.

EXIT THURMAN.

One excellent result of the Ohio election will be the retirement of Allen G. Thurman from the senate and from politics. Twelve years ago, in a year of republican division and apathy, he was carried into the senate; and it was his good fortune six years later to be reelected through similar circumstances. All these years he has sat in the senate actually misrepresenting the political sentiment of Ohio. An aroused public feeling has now at last ousted him. Thurman is a fossil politician. Want of candor and sincerity is become his chief characteristics. He has shown himself an extremely supple and unscrupulous demagogue, both by his inconsistencies on financial questions and by his loud proclamations of that transparent falsehood about "the bayonet at the polls." He was the real author of this last purely trumped-up issue, and it is a positive gratification to know that his dishonesty on the subject has done much to bring him to defeat. He did more than any other man to force the extra session of congress, and he is gloriously hoist with his own petard. As a true northern doughface, he has been a willing, obsequious and faithful servant of southern schemes and methods of politics. He took Ben Wade's place a dozen years ago, and it is fit now that some man of Ben Wade's style should take his place. Of course his fortunes as a presidential candidate are annihilated by the same blow which has ruined his hopes of a succession to the senate.

Reports from the bureau of statistics at Washington confirm statements from Great Britain as to the colonists who are coming into this country prepared in all respects to buy and settle upon our public lands. It is the large increase in this class of immigration that mostly accounts for the general increase. During the month of August there arrived at the port of New York alone 12,981 immigrants, as against 7,019 for the same month last year. Of the 12,981, nearly 4000 were from England alone, while Scotland furnished 648 and Ireland 1907. These figures do not by any means show the full tide of immigration, especially from Great Britain, as many come via Canada, the number coming over the border some months amounting to six and seven thousand, including Canadians as well as those from England.

Our local organ of Bourbon democracy essays to discuss the recent elections in a cheerful spirit, though the effect is about as hopeful as that of extracting sunbeams from cucumbers. It says "democrats have no reason to be discouraged with this result." It would be interesting to know what result could produce despondency in that quarter.

who have been sent to punish the Utes to bear in mind the suggestion of the Cincinnati Commercial that "we should bury our animosities against the red man. And we should at the same time bury the red man."

The temperance alliance of Louisiana asserts that $42,000,000 worth of spirits was drunk in that state last year. Yet the state's obligations, amounting to a good deal less than $12,000,000, were virtually repudiated.

The Ohio election, closing out as it does the western rivals of Samuel Jones Tilden, leaves him sole monarch of all he surveys. It is Tilden's party now, and his right there is none to dispute.

General Grant's reception at Salem was in every way as remarkable as that at Portland. Of these demonstrations there is a simple explanation. The name of General Grant typifies a cause.

General Grant and Party Visit the Capital

AN ENTHUSIASTIC RECEPTION

Music Speeches and Collation

His Reception at Points along the Road

Incidents of the Trip

In accordance with the announcement made in the columns of THE OREGONIAN ... General Grant and his party visited Salem yesterday leaving the Stark street ... at ... A M. The train consisted of three cars ... the president's car which was tendered the party through the courtesy of the president and directors of the O R & N Co ... for a time. The engine President No 1 was elaborately and tastefully decorated with bunting and evergreens, an immense flag ... from the front of the cow catcher and an eagle and owl from the engine house of Multnomah No ... adding beauty to the appearance of the locomotive. Jimmie Anderson had charge of the train and as a conductor promises to become the peer of Bellinger, Strand and Logart whose names are synonyms of courtesy. Johnny Brant as engineer held the throttle while ... as fireman. These with the brakemen made as careful and efficient a crew as ever managed a train and under the direct supervision of Superintendent Brandt spared no pains to make the trip a pleasant one for their guests. With colors flying and spirits brightened the train pulled out promptly on time with the following

The train made no stoppages until it arrived at Oregon City where a large concourse of citizens were collected desirous of catching a glimpse of our distinguished guest. In response to repeated demands General Grant appeared on the rear platform of the president's car—which by the way was finely decorated for the occasion—where he was greeted by Mayor Randall of

OREGON CITY

Who in a few well chosen remarks assured him of their pleasure in thus welcoming him, regretting they had not been privileged to render him a more elaborate reception and assuring him his welcome was none the less sincere.

General Grant responded, briefly thanking the citizens for the honor conferred after which a few moments were spent in general hand shaking—a brass band meanwhile discoursing appropriate music. Several little girls pressed forward and presented the general with choice bouquets until he was fairly loaded down and was compelled to pass them to the ladies in the car. One gentleman grasped Gen Grant's hand and remarked that he had fought with him at Fort Donelson, while a second recalled to his mind incidents of the engagement at Lookout Mountain. Some ten minutes were passed in this way, when Conductor Anderson shouted "all aboard," and the train moved on saluted with the cheers of the assembled multitude. The Albany express train was passed at Clackamas station Engineer McDonald saluting the visitors with a merry touch on the whistle, which caused them to open their windows and ascertain the cause of so great a commotion. On on it sped past farm houses and stations, scarcely a hamlet passing in view which did not show forth recognition, either in the shape of the national emblem or a vigorous waving of white handkerchiefs. Arriving at Aurora the train was again stopped and were saluted with music by the Aurora brass band and the applause of the assembled hundreds. More hand shaking ensued, and on invitation of Vice President Koehler the band stepped aboard the train and accompanied the party to Salem. The thriving German colony appeared enthusiastic in their admiration of General Grant, and although impromptu, the reception was none the less pleasant to all the parties concerned. Once more under way, the next stop was made at Gervais, where a large crowd had collected, desirous of paying their hurried respects to General Grant, who in response to their calls appeared on the rear platform and shook hands with those within his reach. One elderly lady pressed forward and grasping the general's hand exclaimed, "God bless you, General Grant, God bless you. I've long wanted to grasp your hand, and now I am contented. Again, God bless you." Her eyes filled with tears, and even

THE OLD WAR HORSE

Appeared affected by the cordiality of her greeting. Here, as elsewhere along the route, the feeling of warm personal regard for our honored guest was made manifest and all appeared anxious to do him honor. All aboard again and no further stoppages were made until the train arrived at Salem. Word had already reached there the train having been telegraphed from Gervais, and the city bell rang forth the joyous news that General Grant was coming and the capitol city turned out almost en masse to welcome the illustrious visitor. Notwithstanding the brief space of time allowed the committee of arrangements to perfect their plans there was very general satisfaction manifested by every citizen of Salem in the proposed reception to Gen Grant and party and the public entered heartily into the details and the greeting was one that after all, the capitol city might well be proud of. The understanding that the special train provided for the occasion would arrive at 11 o'clock A M was attraction sufficient to call out a large and enthusiastic crowd to welcome him at the depot. The platform was crowded with the expectant multitude, while the roofs of the standing freight cars were literally covered with men and boys desirous of catching a glimpse of the city's guest. All parties creeds and sects were represented the ladies turning out almost en masse. Ringing of the city bell was intended as a signal to

THE SCHOOL CHILDREN

And the public schools of the city were at once dismissed and the little ones requested to form in lines on Court street opposite the court house. They were in charge of their respective teachers and collectively formed a very attractive feature of the display.

As the train came in sight the state artillery stationed just south of the Willamette university thundered forth its welcome being manned by Tom Scott and John Green who never fail to be on hand when national salutes are required. Time and again the old gun belched forth her welcome. The boys in charge apparently resolved to do the case justice, and the reverberations which echoed back from the grain clad hills of Polk sent thrills of patriotic gush through the hearts of those whose presence indicated their hearty accord with the surroundings. All the carriages and cabs in the city had been engaged by the committee having the matter in charge and were in waiting when the train arrived. The general committee of arrangements consisted of the following well known gentlemen: Mayor G W Gray acting as chairman, Hon John G Wright, M L Chamberlain Esq, Hon Ed Hirsch Hon A N Gilbert, H A Johnson, Esq, W L Wade, F J ... J B McClane and M Meyer. It was one appointed at a meeting of the citizens hurriedly called to make arrangements for the proper reception of their guest.

THE RECEPTION COMMITTEE

Consisting of Mayor Gray and Councilmen J J Murphy S F Mathews L S Skiff A C Adams J W Meridith James Coffey A A McCully and C Upstovage immediately formed a passage way which was kept clear until the train stopped prepared to receive their guest. Mayor Gray advanced to the front and as the General stepped from the platform said

General Grant—As a distinguished American citizen we are glad to see and welcome you to Salem. As mayor of the municipality and on behalf of our citizens I take pleasure in tendering to you and your party the hospitalities of our city so long as you may be pleased to remain.

The general made a graceful bow and simply said "I thank you sincerely" and was at once conducted to the carriage—an open barouche drawn by Hon S F Mathews magnificent roans, gaily caparisoned with flags and streamers, Eph Ohinger holding the ribbons in his customary superb style. The Albany brass band assumed the lead and was followed by the carriages containing the guests. Gen. ... the preparations were not as extensive ... elaborate as they otherwise would have been. Several of the business houses were festooned with red white and blue bunting and streamers, flags and banners bearing the words "Welcome Grant" were stretched across the street. Arriving at the Chemeketa Hotel the decorations were more elaborate and evinced considerable taste. An archway erected over the ladies' entrance was completely covered with evergreens and bunting and was very generally admired. The front of the hotel and the windows over the main entrances were heavily festooned and flags of various sizes were promiscuously scattered in and around the building. Alighting from the carriages the party was escorted to the parlors, the general and family retiring to the privacy of their rooms. The corridors were very soon filled with people who patiently awaited the general's reappearance. The band was stationed on the front balcony and hundreds of people stood in the streets below. The general soon appeared and was in turn escorted to the parlors where he was introduced to the members of the city council ... by Hon S ... Adams with the following remarks

Gentlemen—In behalf of the citizens of Salem I extend to you a hearty and cordial welcome. While other cities may surpass us in favorable opportunity ... in decorative demonstration no people can excel us in the sincerity of our high consideration and the cordiality of our hospitality and welcome which we are proud of the opportunity of offering you

To which General Grant made the following response

Gentlemen—I thank you most heartily for the cordiality manifested in this your reception of myself and party. This is the first opportunity I have ever had of visiting this portion of the Willamette valley and I have enjoyed it heartily. Again accept my thanks for the honor shown me then took place Gen Grant taking his position on the north side of the room, the public pouring in at one door and out of the other. For two long hours the general stood there shaking hands and receiving the congratulations of those who desired to thus show their respect for him. Mrs Grant meanwhile clad in a traveling suit received a number of lady admirers and gave a kindly greeting to each. Mr and Mrs S F Mathews of the Chemeketa hotel were here, there and everywhere attending to the comfort of their guests and notwithstanding the crowded condition of the rooms everything passed off without the least disorder. The crowd continued to pour in without sign of cessation and the general was finally taken charge of by the committee and hurried from the room to prepare for luncheon which was spread in the dining room below. Before retiring however, the general stepped upon the balcony and bowed repeatedly to the crowd below and was received with great enthusiasm, the band meanwhile discoursing some choice selections.

THE FORMAL RECEPTION

THE COLLATION

Was it is true hastily provided, but was to say the least excellent in every respect and reflected credit upon Mr Mathews as caterer. The tables were spread on three sides of the room, the General and his party occupying seats at the head of the table with Gov Thayer and state officers as vis-a-vis. In addition to the party who arrived on the special train their were a number of specially invited guests including state county and city officers the number at the tables being something like 125. Appetites had been sharpened with long waiting and the collation was keenly enjoyed by all. Immediately at its close the party again entered their carriages and were driven to the depot where they boarded the train preparatory to starting on their homeward bound trip. Messrs J M Patterson and John W Minto, as marshals, managed everything nicely and the trip throughout was a most enjoyable one and was so repeatedly pronounced by the guests of the day. The citizens certainly deserve great credit for arranging the details so completely and it was an auspicious ending to the visit to Oregon of Gen U S Grant and party.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

Mr J F Miller has just opened a boot and shoe store at the corner of Third and Morrison streets. He has a fine stock made from first class material and will sell for cash at the very lowest rates.

Who would not enjoy the luxury of a good smoke when cigars can be purchased so cheaply. Frank M Cohn at Blum's old corner under the Holton House publishes elsewhere his "scale of prices." He asks the public to try the famous "Owl" cigar.

John Cran & Co, will display to day a fine line of circulars, dolmans and cloaks received from San Francisco and New York by the steamer which arrived last evening. Among the lot are a few fur trimmed of remarkable richness and beauty. Ladies are invited to call and examine Mr Cran's stock.

THE POSTMAN.

WHAT THE LETTER CARRIERS MAY AND WHAT THEY MAY NOT DO

According to the new rules of the postoffice department letter carriers must not contract debts or borrow money along routes and if they do will be liable to severe censure or dismissal from the service. They are not allowed to solicit contributions of money or gifts or presents of any kind or nature either personally or through parties; they must not issue or distribute complimentary cards, prints or publications or any substitute therefor which are intended to induce the public to make gifts to them. They are also prohibited from selling tickets to theaters, concerts, balls, fairs, picnics, excursions or any other entertainment of any kind and also they are not allowed under any circumstances to deliver any matter but the regular mail upon their route. They must report to the postmaster all injuries to mail boxes distributed along their routes and must not put letters in letter boxes or under the doors of houses which are not at the time occupied in part or entirely by the party to whom the letter is addressed. Furthermore it is contrary to the rules to

DELIVER A LETTER ON THE STREET

And no matter how well the carrier may know a party for whom he has a letter he may not give it to the party on the street but must deliver it to the address indicated upon the direction. They may receive letters for mailing which are properly stamped and may carry a limited supply of stamps and stamped envelopes for sale. They cannot however take a letter without a stamp upon it although the money for the stamp is tendered along with the letter.

Carriers are most positively forbidden to deliver any mailable matter not going through the post office; also to exhibit any mail matter to persons other than those to whom it is addressed or to attend to any other business during the hours they are employed by the postoffice. Another important rule is that carriers are not allowed to return a letter to any party who has deposited it in the street boxes or who claims to have done so. The only means of obtaining a letter in this emergency is to apply at once to the postoffice.

FRIDAY MORNING, OCT 17, 1879.

THE WISE THOUGHT.

She was sitting under the shadow of a fragrant lime tree that overhung a very ancient wall, and as the water fell into her pitcher she was mingling with its music the tones of her "Jew's harp," the only instrument upon which Norah Clary had learned to play. She was a merry maiden of "sweet seventeen," a rustic belle as well as a rustic beauty, and a terrible coquette; and as she had what in Scotland they call a "tocker," in England a "dowry," and in Ireland a "pretty penny o' money" it is scarcely necessary to state, in addition, that she had a bachelor. Whether the tune which was certainly given to alto—was or was not designed as a summons to her lover, I cannot take upon myself to say; but her lips and fingers had not been long occupied before her lover was at her side.

"We may as well give it up, Morris Donovan," she said somewhat abruptly, "look, 'twould be as easy to twist the top off the great hill of Howth as make father and mother agree about any one thing. They've been playing the rule of contrary these twenty years, and it's not likely they'll take a turn now.

"It's mighty hard, so it is," replied handsome Morris, "that married people can't draw together? Norah darlint! that wouldn't be the way with us. It's one we'd be in heart and sowl, and an example of love and—"

"Folly," interrupted the maiden, laughing. "Morris, Morris, we've quarreled a score of times already; and a bit of a breeze makes life all the pleasanter. Shall I talk about the merry jig I danced with Phil Kennedy, or repeat what Mark Doolan said of me Mary Grey?—eh, Morris?"

"Leave joking, now, Norry; God only knows how I love you," he said, in a voice broken by emotion; "I'm yer equal as far as money goes; and no young farmer in the country can tell a better stock to his share than mine; yet I don't pretend to deserve you for all that; only I can't help saying that, when we love each other (now don't go to contradict me, Norry, because ye've as good as owned it over and over again), and yer father agreeable, and all, to think that yer mother, just out of divilment, should be putting betwixt us for no reason upon earth, only to 'spite' her lawful husband, is what sets me mad entirely, and shows her to be a good for——"

"Stop, Mister Morris," exclaimed Norah, laying her hand upon his mouth, so as effectually to prevent a sound escaping; "it's my mother you're talking of, and it would be ill-blood, as well as ill-bred, to hear a word said against an own parent. Is that the pattern of yer manners, sir; or did ye ever hear me turn my tongue against one belonging to you?"

"I ask yer pardon, my own Norah," he replied meekly, as in duty bound; "for the sake of the lamb we spare the sheep. Why not? and I'm not going to gainsay, but yer mother—"

"The least said 's the soonest mended!" again interrupted the impatient girl. "Good even, Morris, and God bless you; they'll be after missing me within, and it's little mother thinks where I am."

"Norah, above all the girls at wake or pattern, I've been true to you. We have grown together, and since ye were the height of a rose bush ye have been dearer to me than anything else on earth. Do, Norah, for the sake of our young hearts' love, do think if there is no way to win yer mother over. It ye'd take me without her leave, sure it's nothing I'd care for the loss of th ousands, let alone what ye've got. Dearest Norah, think; since you'll do nothing without her consent, do, think; for once be serious, and don't laugh."

"I'm not going to laugh, Morris," replied the little maid at last, after a very long pause; "I've a wise thought in my head for once. His reverence, your uncle, you say, spoke to father to speak to mother about it. I wonder, and he a priest, that he hadn't more sense! Sure, mother was the man; but I've got a wise thought. Good night, dear Morris, good night."

The lass sprang lightly over the fence into her own garden, leaving her lover perdu at the other side, without possessing an idea of what her "wise thought" might be. When she entered the kitchen, matters were going on as usual—her mother bustling in style, and as cross "as a bag of weasels."

"Jack Clary," said she, addressing herself to her husband, who sat quietly in the chimney corner smoking his duddeen, "it's well ye've got a wife who knows what's what! God help me! I've little good of a husband, barring the name! Are you sure Black Nell's in the stable?" The husband nodded. "The cow and the calf, had they fresh straw?" Another nod. "Bad cess to ye, can't ye use yer tongue, and answer a civil question?" continued the lady.

"My dear," he replied, "sure one like you has enough talk for ten."

This very cut observation was, like most truths, so disagreeable that a severe storm would have followed had not Norah stepped up to her father and whispered in his ear, "—don't think the stable door is fastened." Mrs. Clary caught the sound and in no gentle terms ordered her husband to attend to the comforts of Black Nell.

"I'll go with my father and see," said Norah.

"That's like my own child, always careful," observed the mother, as the father and daughter closed the door.

"Dear father," began Norah, "it isn't altogether about the stable I wanted ye, but—but—the priest said something to you to day about—Morris Donovan."

"Yes, darling, and about yerself, my sweet Norry."

"Did ye speak to mother about it?"

"No, darling, she's been so cross all day, I was forced to go through a dale for peace and quietness. If I was like other men, and got drunk, and wasted, it might be in reason; but —— as to Morris, she was very fond of the boy till she found that I liked him and then, my jewel, she turned like sour milk all in a minute. I'm afraid even the priest 'll get no good of her."

"Father, dear father," said Norah, "suppose ye were to say nothing about it, good or bad, and just pretend to take a sudden dislike to Morris, and let the priest speak to her himself, she'll come round."

"Out of opposition to me, eh?"

"Yes."

"And let her gain the day, then? That would be cowardly," replied the farmer, drawing himself up. "No, I won't."

"Father, dear, you don't understand," said the cunning lass; "sure ye're for Morris; and when we are—that is, if—I mean—suppose—father, you know what I mean," she continued, and luckily the twilight concealed her blushes—"if that took place, it's you that would have yer own way."

"True for ye, Norry, my girl, true for ye; I never thought of that before!" and, pleased with the idea of "tricking" his wife, the old man fairly capered for joy. "But stay a while—stay, stay, stay!" he commenced; "how am I to manage? Sure the priest himself will be here to-morrow morning early; and he's out upon a station now, so there's no speaking with him. He's no way quick, either. We'll be bothered entirely if he comes in on a sudden!"

"Leave it to me, dear father; leave it all to me!" exclaimed the animated girl. "Only pluck up a spirit, and whenever Morris' name is mentioned abuse him; but not with all yer heart, father—only from the teeth out."

When they re-entered the fresh-boiled potatoes sent a warm, curling steam to the very rafters of the lofty kitchen; they were poured out into a large wicker dish, and on the top of the pile rested a plate of coarse, white salt, noggins of buttermilk were filled on the dresser, and on a small, round table a cloth was spread, and some delf plates awaited the more delicate repast which the farmer's wife was herself preparing.

"What's for supper, mother?" inquired Norah, as she drew her wheel toward her, and employed her fairy foot in whirling it round.

"Plaguey snipeens," she replied, "bits o' bog chickens, that you've always had such a fancy for; Barney Leary kilt them himself."

"So I did," said Barney, grinning; "and that stick wid a hook, of Morris Donovan's is the finest thing in the world for knocking 'em down."

"If Morris Donovan's stick touched them they shan't come here," said the farmer, striking the poor little table such a blow with his clenched hand as made not only it, but Mrs. Clary jump.

"And why so, pray?" asked the dame.

"Because nothing belonging to Morris, let alone Morris himself, shall come into this house," replied Clary; "he's not to my liking anyhow, and there's no good in his bothering here after what he won't get."

"Excellent!" thought Norah.

"Lord save us!" ejaculated Mrs. Clary, as she placed the grilled snipes on the table, "what's come to the man?" Without heeding his resolution, she was proceeding to distribute the savory "birdeens," when to her astonishment, her usually tame husband threw the dish and its contents into the flames. The good woman absolutely stood for a moment aghast. The calm, however, was not of long duration. She soon rallied and commenced hostilities. "How dare you, ye spalpeen, throw away any of God's mate after that fashion, and I to the fore? What do you mane, I say?"

"I mane that nothing touched by Morris Donovan shall come under this roof; and if I catch that girl of mine looking at the same a de of the road he walks on, I'll tear the eyes out of her head and send her to a nunnery!"

"You will! And dare you to say that to my face, to a child of mine! You will, will ye? We'll see, my boy! I'll tell ye what, if I like, Morris Donovan shall come into this house, and what's more, be master of this house; and that's what you never had the heart to be yet, ye poor ould snail!"

So saying, Mrs. Clary endeavored to rescue from the fire the hissing remains of the burning snipes. Norah attempted to assist her mother, but Clary lifting her up, somewhat after the fashion of an eagle raising a golden wren with its claw, fairly put her out of the kitchen. This was the signal for fresh hostilities. Mrs. Clary persisted in abusing not only Morris, but Morris' uncle, Father Donovan, until at last the farmer's helpmate swore, aye, and roundly too, by cross and saint, that, before the next sunset, Norah Clary should be Norah Donovan. I wish you could have seen Norry's eye dancing with joy and exultation, as it peeped through the latch-hole, it sparkled more brightly than the richest diamond in her monarch's crown; for it was filled with hope and love.

The next morning before the sun was fully up, he was throwing his early beams over the glowing cheek of Norah Clary, for her "wise thought" had prospered, and was hastening to the trysting tree, where, "by chance," either morning or evening, she generally met Morris Donovan. I don't know how it is, but the moment the course of true love "runs smooth," it becomes very uninteresting, except to the parties concerned. So it is now left for me only to say that the maiden, after a due and proper time consumed in teasing and tantalizing her intended, told him her sancy plan and its result. And the lover hastened, upon the wings of love (which I beg my readers clearly to understand are swifter and stronger in Ireland than in any other country), to apprise the priest of the arrangement, well knowing that his reverence loved his nephew and niece that was to be (to say nothing of the wedding supper and the profits arising therefrom) too well not to aid their merry jest.

What bustle, what preparation, what feasting, what dancing, gave the country folks enough to talk about during the happy Christmas holidays, I cannot now describe. The bride of course looked lovely, and "sheepish;" and the bridegroom—but bridegrooms are always uninteresting. One act, however, is worth recording. When Father Donovan concluded the ceremony, before the bridal kiss had passed, Farmer Clary, without any reason that his wife could discover, most indecorously sprang up, seized a shillelah of stout oak, and, whirling it rapidly over his head, shouted: "Carry me out! by the powers she's beat! we've won the day!—ould Ireland forever! Success, boys!—she's beat, she's beat!"

The priest, too, seemed vastly to enjoy this extemporaneous effusion, and even the bride laughed outright. Whether the good wife discovered the plot or not, I never heard, but of this I am certain, that the joyous Norah never had reason to repeat her "wise thought."

U. S. Bonds—5s, 3½; 4½s, 9½; 4s, 5½.

Silver, English standard, per ounce 5 fine, 52.

In local financial matters there are no important changes in the situation. The recent imports of coin from San Francisco have kept up the supply to the volume of the demand, and while there is less surplus on the market there is no general stringent feeling.

The wheat market has been rather more than usually animated so far this week and buyers have manifested an extensive desire to purchase round lots of good shipping, and those who were so fortunate as to have ships at hand which had been chartered under the rates which prevailed a while ago can afford to pay and have paid fully $1 95 per cental; but a quotation more nearly descriptive of the general condition of the market would be $1 90 and firm. Over 75 000 bushels were received during Monday and Tuesday, the largest receipts in the same length of time ever known in Portland. Freights for Europe are advancing and prevent the rise in wheat here which the high prices in England would seem to warrant. As high as 75s per ton, we are informed, is asked, but as yet no one is disposed to take up ships at that figure.

In minor products there is considerable activity. Eggs are temporarily scarce and sell at 25@27½c per dozen. Potatoes dull at 60@65c per 100 lbs. Hops have been much in request and for good varieties well cured and packed command about 25c per pound. Other products unchanged.
